Director's Note

Welcome to Til Beth Do Us Part - a hilarious comedy with some truth tucked inside that we all can relate to at some point.

The Canebrake Players has always meant so much to me and my family- most of us grew up on this stage. Coming back to this theater as an adult has been nothing short of special, from working back stage and now to directing. I am so thankful to The Canebrake Players for trusting me with my first directing role. It's been fun, chaotic, occasionally fueled by caffeine and pure panic moments, but I wouldn't trade any of it!

This show reminds us that starting over doesn't always mean running away. Sometimes the best restart is right where you arewith a fresh mindset.. and a little rearranging of the furniture. I hope it gives you some time for relaxation and a lot of laughter.

To the amazing cast and crew- thank you for pouring your heart and talent into this production. You all have made this experience truly special. To my "village," thank you for your help and reminding me that the show must go on.. I could have never made it without each of you!

Now sit back and enjoy! And laugh!

With Love,

Allison Ward

About the Canebrake Players

In 1981, a group of local thespians came together to form the Canebrake Players. Productions have included comedy, drama, mystery, musicals, and fantasy, housed in the historical Old School on Main. A children's play each year provides excellent training, including production techniques and acting skills. In 1992, a scholarship was established which is presented to a high school senior who has participated over the years. While some productions have featured professional directors, almost all the directors, actors, and crew members volunteer their time to bring the arts to Demopolis.
